Financial aid money to help pay for college or career school.

Financial Assistance Information Financial aid is money to help pay for college or career school.

You should start by submitting a Free Application for Federal Student Aid \(FAFSA®\) form.

You will have to fill out the FAFSA form every year you're in school in order to stay eligible for federal student aid. Please call a school campus or go to the financial aid office for more information and any assistance.

Federal student aid includes:

Grants financial aid that doesn't have to be repaid (unless, for example, you withdraw from school and owe a refund). Federal Pell Grants usually are awarded only to undergraduate students who have not earned a bachelor's or a professional degree. Amounts can change yearly.

The amount you get, though, will depend on

- your financial need,
- your cost of attendance,
- your status as a full-time or part-time student, and
- your plans to attend school for a full academic year (defined as 900hr clock hours) or less.
- You may not receive Federal Pell Grant funds from more than one school at a time

Loans borrowed money for college or career school; you must repay your loans, with interest. Loans made by the federal government, called federal student loans, usually offer borrowers lower interest rates and have more flexible repayment options than loans from banks or other private sources. The U.S. Department of Education has federal student loan programs:

- The William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan (Direct Loan) Program is the largest federal student loan program. Under this program, the U.S. Department of Education is your lender. There are different types of Direct Loans available:

Direct Subsidized Loans are loans made to eligible undergraduate students who demonstrate financial need to help cover the costs of higher education at a college or career school. Here's a quick overview of Direct Subsidized Loans:

- Direct Subsidized Loans are available to undergraduate students with financial need.
- Your school determines the amount you can borrow, and the amount may not exceed your financial need.
- The U.S. Department of Education pays the interest on a Direct Subsidized Loan while you're in school at least half-time, or for the first six months after you leave school (referred to as a grace period*), and during a period of deferment (a postponement of loan payments).

Direct Unsubsidized Loans are loans made to eligible undergraduate, graduate, and professional students, but in this case, the student does not have to demonstrate financial need to be eligible for the loan. Here's a quick overview of Direct Unsubsidized Loans:

- Direct Unsubsidized Loans are available to undergraduate and graduate students; there is no requirement to demonstrate financial need.
- Your school determines the amount you can borrow based on your cost of attendance and other financial aid you receive.
- You are responsible for paying the interest on a Direct Unsubsidized Loan during all periods.
- If you choose not to pay the interest while you are in school and during grace periods and deferment or forbearance periods, your interest will accrue (accumulate) and be capitalized (that is, your interest will be added to the principal amount of your loan).

Direct PLUS Loans are loans made to parents of dependent undergraduate students to help pay for education expenses not covered by other financial aid. Here's a quick overview of Direct PLUS Loans:

- The U.S. Department of Education is your lender.
- You must not have an adverse credit history.
- The maximum loan amount is the cost of attendance (determined by the school) minus any other financial aid received
- be the parent of a dependent undergraduate student enrolled at least half-time at an eligible school.

Direct Consolidation Loans allow you to combine all of your eligible federal student loans into a single loan with a single loan servicer. Schools that enter into an agreement with a potential student, student, or parent of a student regarding a Title IV, HEA loan are required to inform the student or parent that the loan will be submitted to the National Student Loan Data System (NSLDS), and will be accessible by guaranty agencies, lenders, and schools determined to be authorized users of the data system
